Bulbs for Remembrance

The weather was kind to the group assembled on the Millenium Green in Wormelow for the Service of Remembrance. Some people had travelled long distances to pay their respects by laying a wreath. For Rosemary Rigby, founder of the Violette Zsabo Museum, remembrance is especially important, honouring the bravery of all war heroes including Violette who was captured while working for the French resistance.

The children from Year 6 at Much Birch School joined Rosemary and Reverend Mark Johnson for the Service. The children had been studying the World Wars and had each written a poem that they read during the service. Their words were inspiring and thoughtful.

Bulb Planting

Rosemary is asking for bulbs to be planted on the Millenium Green and would be delighted to receive any bulbs and offers of help with planting them.

Trip to Aberaeron October by Eric Joseph

Its coming to the end of October and I am restless. We must get some time away before winter sets in. A few weeks ago we had a great time in Ambleside with our friends, Eileen and Dave. This time we decide choose a nice cottage close to Aberaeron. Sleeps six, sea view, two beds and baths, ideal.

Set off on Monday 31 October weather with overcast sky. After Kington and Rhayader sun peeps out from the cloud. Eileen is interested in the trip because we travel through the country where Doe used to live. We truly live in a fantastic country - amazing scenery. Elan Village for lunch - sun comes out, lighting up the beautiful autumn colours. We're amazed at how low the reservoirs are—need loads of rain to fill this by spring. Get to Hafod around four, really nice bungalow .

Tuesday 7324steps First day so we stay local. Drove 3 miles to National Trust place at Llanerchaeron—wet and miserable and closed till Thursday so we drive south to Llangranog where my mother was born. Still miserable weather! We try Newquay, not much better, but had a coffee in the PenWig. This used to be a smart hotel. Now it's a fast food place. Eileen cooked tonight which was nice.

Wednesday 7825 steps A tour around today, started at Tregaron Marshes, at least it is dry but very strong wind - walked on the duck boards, couldn't find the sundews that were here last year. On to Strata Florida Abbey, once again the rain caught us up! We drive beyond Devils Bridge up to Nant Y Moch reservoir, white roads, very little traffic, fab drive. Weather improved slightly, probably ten miles till we find white lines in the road at Talybont. Back to Aberystwyth, howling gale, rain in buckets, gigantic waves breaking over the road. I have never seen the sea this wild, did see a few starlings but I doubt if they'd have roosted under the pier tonight. My turn to cook, pork chops in orange sauce.

Thursday 8643 steps Clear blue skies, back to Llanerchaeron where we spent a good few hours. It's NT, we are members, so it's free - walked the lake, lovely reflections, then the gardens and around the old farm yard buildings and machinery, then to the house, very informative guide, really very interesting history. The cafe was open, three bacon butties, a cake, three Latte and one tea kept us full till tonight. Drove to Lampeter, then on to Talley abbey, a very interesting place. Because of a massive feud between the White monks and the Cistercians the Abbey was never finished. Off over Brechfa via Llansawel and down to Llandysul where Mum met Dad all those years ago. Blue skies turned to rain and wind. Fish & chips at Aberaeron tonight.

Friday 10796 steps First I must find an optician to replace a screw in my glasses -twenty minutes of fiddling and being told the screw that came with it did not fit, so I picked up my glasses and went to another optician who put it right in about a minute. On to Teifi Marshes, fab snack first, then a couple of hours walk. The weather is really good - no rain, no wind and its quite warm. Then on to Cenarth waterfalls - the river in flood after months of no rain, so it was spectacular. We had an ice cream then back home via Newcastle Emlyn. The girls cooked tonight, a fry up.

Saturday 4286 steps probably the longest driving day, bad forecast but this morning looked better. the plan was to drive to Machynlleth, Mallwyd, Dinas Mawddwy and on a white road over the highest pass in Wales, Bwlch y Groes, then down to Llanuwchllyn on to another white road to Bronaber, Dolgellau, the Talyllyn lake and Tyn y Cornel, hotel where Doe and I planted over a 1000 heathers for a chap I used to work for (it has been sold quite awhile ago), then down to Tywyn and home.

The day started well, with some sun but gradually turned to wind and rain. From Machynlleth on A70 we looked for a small shop or woollen mill we knew - lots of Welsh crafts and a nice cafe. Weather so bad we can only see a third of Wales the other two thirds are in the cloud, so, we head for Tyn y Cornell (the hotel set in the corner of Lake Tal Y Llyn). I have fed fish in this lake like sharks, but today, the lake is overflowing, the hotel is busy, the heathers that Doe and I planted all those years ago are overgrown with birch trees and bramble and to cap it all it's monsoon weather, so off to Tywyn, the first time this week we set foot on sand. The rain has stopped, thank goodness.

Sunday Sunny! If only we had done yesterday's trip today. We stroll around Aberaeron, a quaint place, with houses painted in pastel shades. Coffee at our little cafe in the main street (oops, there is only one street) then the rain came back with a vengeance, so played Rhumikub all afternoon, Doe and I cooked the final meal, Chicken.

Monday Final day. It has been a lovely place if only there was a decent shower that gave more than a trickle! Our route home is via Tregaron and over the mountain to Abergwesin, Beulah, Builth, quite straightforward. The road is single track , mostly open hill, it's so beautiful with autumn colours, What a journey, up hill and down dale with only one road off down to the Llynbrianne reservoir and Llandovery. A fantastic trip, must do this in the spring when all the oak woods would be full of bluebells.

Jobs to do in the garden during December

Last Autumn was mild but this year it has been even warmer. Leaves had started to fall from the trees because of the drought but then the rain arrived and those that had not fallen seem to be hanging on waiting for a frost. The rain that has fallen has swollen my carrots, beetroot and parsnips which a few weeks ago were very slender specimens. It is said that nature evens things out and this appears to be the case.

It looks like the lawns will need a trim before Christmas. We have managed to do a number of tidying up jobs during this warm period, some of which are long overdue.

What can we do in December?

- *In mild dry weather, and only if necessary, cut the lawn with blades high, leaving 35 – 50 mm of grass.
- *Dahlias and Agapanthus left in the ground to overwinter will need a thick mulch of compost and/or chipped bark.
- *Move Orchids to an East facing window. Other indoor plants benefit from being in a lighter position but away from radiators.
- *Tender potted plants need to be in a greenhouse or shed now.
- *If not already done bubble wrap the inside of the greenhouse at the beginning of the month.
- *Prune climbing roses.
- *Protect Figs with fleece.
- *Garlic can still be planted.
- *Vent the greenhouse on warmer days to reduce condensation.
- *Rhubarb can be split. Leave the crowns on the surface so that they get frosted and then plant out in early Spring.
- *Plant blueberries into large tubs containing ericaceous compost and drainage material. Blueberries need a pH of around 4.5.
- *Prune blackcurrants removing one third of branches at base.
- *Salad crops can be sown in a greenhouse but will be slow growing due to the low light levels. Watch out for slugs.
- *Check stored potatoes and apples. Dispose of rotten potatoes and put rotting apples out for the birds.
- *Put out a variety of food for birds – seeds, fat balls, stale cheese and pieces of apple and pears.
- *If you have nest boxes, clean out any previous nests or thatch and put a small amount of hay, straw or wood shavings in the bottom before securely re-hanging them.

Christmas Lights

When we envisage festive lights
We think of those on Christmas trees
That twinkle in amidst the tinsel
And the chocolate novelties.

Or those along a village street,
In bright-lit windows and above,
That always look so magical –
A part of Christmas we all love.

A shimmering suburban semi's
Something we see more and more;
Even a modest bungalow
Ablaze like a department store!

The flickering of candlelight's
A warm glow welcome anywhere:
There on a neighbour's windowsill
For everybody else to share.

But there's another Christmas light
Far greater than the rest of them -
The brightly shining star that led
The Three Wise Men to Bethlehem.

Limericks

I'm appearing in panto this year,
Though the part I'll be given's not clear;
I am game for the Dame
Or the Prince (whatsisname),
Or the pantomime horse, front or rear.

The humble limerick is one of our most popular verse forms—five rhyming lines following a simple AABBA pattern. Limericks are either in or, as seems to be the case at the moment, out of fashion.

High time then that they enjoyed a renewal in popularity. And why shouldn't that begin here in The Birches, and beyond?

Lets collect enough new, particularly clever or funny (or both) limericks and put them together in a little book that might ultimately be sold for a deserving local cause or causes - and to inspire others.

Anybody any age can write a limerick if they put their mind to it. So why not have a go. And send something in to the newsletter. Watch out for an update of how things are going in the next issue.

From Revd Mark

Why do atheists celebrate Christmas? It is a question I have pondered from time to time. As a Christian, it is obvious why I celebrate the festival but why do atheists? Surely, they would be less hypocritical if they could find something around that time of the year to celebrate.

For example, on 25th December in 1066, William 1st was crowned King of England. This was the last time England was successfully invaded! Or how about 1492 – on Christmas Day Christopher Columbus' flag ship, the Santa Maria, ran aground on the north coast of Hispaniola. Or Christiaan Huygens, astronomer and after whom the spacecraft that went to Titan in 2005 was named, who created the first pendulum clock.

Each of these could have a wonderful celebration! For the crowning of William, we could eat items from the coronation feast! No turkey, obviously, but duck, chicken, beef, pork etc. No potatoes but you could have pigs in blankets! For the sinking of the Santa Maria, we could have ships biscuits, and food from the Caribbean, such as papaya and bananas. And, for the invention of the pendulum clock, what better than After Eights!

Ok, this is not entirely serious. But if we are to take Christmas seriously, then let us at least do it honestly and admit that we don't actually know the date of Jesus' birth and we did take an existing Roman or Pagan festival and make it Christian. Let's enjoy the food and the company and everything else that goes with it, also remembering the reason for the season.

Wishing you all a happy and blessed Christmas

The Masons at Merrivale

I last wrote an entry for the newsletter in mid April. My last line was 'Lets enjoy the lovely weather while it's here and hope it continues for some time'. Well, well. Who is it that says be careful what you wish for?

I look at Merrivale now, with it's lush green grass. What a comparison to the browny green fields of the summer. The drought has had a huge impact on the farm. We managed to take our first silage cut on 10th May which produced a lovely crop of high quality food. We also made hay, something we seldom do, but with the hot weather guaranteed it was an obvious choice and meant we could avoid the cost and need of plastic bale & wrap.

We scraped three more silage cuts producing nowhere near our usual quantities. We did however, make a big pit full of whole crop silage and amazingly the fodder beet survived the drought well enough to produce a good crop. Two cuts of silage have been used up to feed the cattle during the summer as there was no grass and we are now buying in hay to eke out our food supplies until, we hope, an early spring. The cows always went out every day during the summer to pick away at any grass there. The main decision was to find them paddocks with plenty of shade when it was so hot. We could then send them out at night to paddocks without any. They were given plenty of food inside during this time while they waited to be milked.

Having taken on some extra ground last year, we have also had a crop of wheat which is still in store on the farm waiting to be sold. We can't use it ourselves for feed as the land is in it's first year of organic conversion. It takes two years before the ground can be certified as organic. During that time the effect of any previous artificial fertiliser or pesticides will be lost.

The Milk Hut has been busy throughout the summer and is proving to be a great success. Bob & I somehow managed to keep the veg side going during the drought, mainly due to lots of watering when planting, hot work in the sun.

Meeting the folks who visit the hut is a delight. Their enthusiasm & support is a great positive for the family. We are slowly adding to products on offer as you will see from our social media pages and I don't think we can add too much more now with the space that we have. We are hoping to put a coffee machine in, which we think will be popular but that is for the future.

The big aim on the farm for the future is to reduce our carbon footprint and emissions. This will involve covering our slurry lagoon, applying the slurry on the land with new equipment and feeding the cows to produce less methane.

Lots of experimental work is being undertaken at the moment and I'm sure huge improvements will be made in the next few years so we can reach our target. The world is a strange place at the moment but the need for us to produce the food we require for ourselves and other countries can never be underestimated.

Early seasons greetings to you all and let's hope for a better 2023 for everyone. Sue.

Uncle Norman's Wartime Memories

Part 2

The farm was mainly dairy, with arable crops and employed several men and boys, as it was unmechanised and labour intensive. There was no refrigeration and in hot weather so churns were suspended by chains in the underground water tanks to keep the milk fresh. Any not needed for local sale was left out for daily collection by Cadbury's. Milk chocolate (rationed) was the real thing then; now you don't even know where it is made. My mother who had hardly ever seen a cow before was roped in to help with the twice daily milking and suffered lifelong arthritis after having a galvanised milking pail flattened against the back of her knee by a cow called Blossom. "Kickers" usually had their back legs tied together.

Food was strictly rationed but we illegally and secretly churned butter from the cream taken off the milk; no one noticed as the milk was so rich! The butter churner lived in Mr and Mrs Dykes' bedroom where this weekly secret event took place. However, we were allowed to kill a pig for home consumption - if the whole household gave up their meagre bacon ration. So we able enjoyed delicious thick cut home cured fat bacon and ham!

I remember we had great fun helping with the milk round as the milk float had springs and pneumatic tyres and, at a canter, would bounce crazily along the unmetalled lanes, sending milk crates crashing up and down in a very satisfying manner! Although our attempt at replacing some of the spilt milk with well water was noticed by a very angry lady who did not appreciate a layer of sand at the bottom of her daily pinta!

There has been publicity about a network of secret bunkers that Churchill initiated as bases for saboteurs in the event of invasion. We unknowingly discovered one of these when exploring Aconbury Woods, the site of an Iron Age Fort overlooking Hereford. It was made of a timber-lined shaft with a lid covered with earth and vegetation. This was kept very secret and we beat a hasty retreat. I could still locate the approximate site but there is probably no trace of it now.

When Coventry was blitzed we saw the glow from the sky from 60 miles away but were kept in the dark

While all this was going on Margaret Dyke, about my age, and I taught ourselves to ride on an aptly named pony, Paddy, and the off-duty milk round horse Mick, a fast trotter, but not at all keen on galloping or jumping. I remember we later followed the South Herefordshire Hunt, and I was treated to language as colourful as her complexion when I impeded the progress of the Master on my very unimpressive mount Blackberry – the farm carthorse. She was an extremely crafty horse and learnt to simulate lameness if she saw anyone approaching with a halter intending to making her work. She was also particularly partial to cattle cake and worked out how to operate the latch on the door of the shed where it was kept!
